COURSE OUTLINE OF RECORD – Official

Subject:	ANTH
Course Number:	4H
Descriptive Title:	Honors Language and Culture
Division:	Behavioral and Social Sciences
Department:	Anthropology
Course Disciplines:	Anthropology
Catalog Description:	This honors course, intended for students in the Honors Transfer Program, introduces students to the anthropological study of language. Using a crosscultural approach, students will examine the relationship between language and social factors such as gender, ethnicity and class. Topics will also include structural linguistics, language change, language extinction, language acquisition in children, cognitive aspects of language, language varieties and non-verbal communication. This course is enriched through extensive, rigorous reading, writing, and research assignments. Note: Students may take either Anthropology 4 or Anthropology 4H. Duplicate credit will not be awarded.

Student Learning Outcomes:	SLO #1 Language Extinction In a written assignment or objective exam question(s), students will demonstrate an understanding of language extinction by identifying the various cultural and historical factors that contribute to language loss and describing the preservation efforts applied to languages targeted for extinction. SLO #2 Language and Social Factors In a written assignment or objective exam question(s), students will demonstrate an understanding of the relationship between language and social factors such as gender, ethnicity and class. SLO #3 'Pidgin' In a written assignment or objective exam question(s), students will demonstrate an understanding of the language variety known as 'pidgin' by identifying several features regarding its structure (as compared to a standard language) and identifying the social and historical conditions under which a pidgin develops.
Course Objectives:	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Identify the key differences between the approaches, perspectives and methods used by linguistic anthropologists and linguists. 2. Identify and distinguish between the various fieldwork and data collection techniques used by linguistic anthropologists. 3. Compare and contrast some of the features of human and animal communication systems. 4. Explain the biological basis for speech and the critical period for language acquisition. 5. Identify and describe the following as they pertain to the branch of structural/descriptive linguistics known as phonology: phone, phoneme, allophone and minimal pair/set. 6. Compare and contrast phonemics and phonetics, as two forms of phonological analysis. 7. Define the concept morpheme and identify various types that are used in language along with their functions (i.e. root morpheme, bound morpheme, free morpheme). 8. Explain how syntax functions in a language, and contrast it briefly with grammar. 9. Compare and contrast the fundamental ideas behind the early theories of language acquisition (e.g. behaviorist psychology theory) with later theories such as sociocultural theory. 10. Describe the premise behind the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis and assess the criticisms against it. 11. Explain what cognates from various related languages reveal about the relationships between these languages. 12. Assess and discuss how language is correlated with social factors such as gender, ethnicity and class. 13. Compare and contrast the concepts dialect and accent. 14. Using a cross-cultural approach, identify and describe some examples of kinesics and proxemics. 15. Identify and contrast among the cultural, historical, and political factors that lead to language change in a society.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> 16. Identify and discuss some of the key differences between alphabetic and logographic writing systems. 17. Examine the various cultural factors that contribute to language loss and evaluate the preservation efforts applied to languages targeted for extinction. 18. Describe the role of linguistic anthropologists in dealing with a society's language use problems and explain how this is an example of applied anthropology. 19. Conduct scholarly research independently to enrich multiple reading and writing tasks.

Primary Method of Evaluation:	1) Substantial writing assignments
Typical Assignment Using Primary Method of Evaluation:	Write a five- to six-page typed paper that details a real life example of language endangerment in a modern population. Describe some of the key demographics of the community, identify and discuss several of the external and/or global factors that influence the language usage of members of this community, explain in detail how these factors affect peoples' lives and how they're contributing to language change and loss, and provide an assessment for the future of this language (such as how long linguists anticipate it will last).
Critical Thinking Assignment 1:	Write a three- to four-page typed essay that evaluates the following position from a cultural relativist perspective: All language varieties are equally valid as systems of communication. Viewing particular dialects or speech varieties as more correct or advanced than others is a social judgment and not supported by linguistic data. Support your answer with several examples of language variation that were discussed in lectures, textbook chapters, assigned articles and/or in-class films viewed this semester.
Critical Thinking Assignment 2:	In a three- to four-page typed essay compare and contrast the ways in which silence is used in Euro-American communication and in Western Apache culture. Include a discussion of at least two of the four contexts in which the Apaches use silence and how these have often been misinterpreted by outsiders.
Other Evaluation Methods:	Completion, Essay Exams, Fieldwork, Multiple Choice, Reading Reports, True/False, Written Homework
If Other:
Instructional Methods:	Discussion, Group Activities, Lecture, Multimedia presentations
If other:
Work Outside of Class:	Answer questions, Required reading, Study, Written work (such as essay/composition/report/analysis/research)
